HANKOW ESCAPED SACK BY PAYING TUCHUN $100,000

Tribute Collected By "Gen." Wang After Wuchang Mutiny

VICTIMS SEEK REDRESS

Organisation Formed To Press Claims For Damage At Peking

(Staff Correspondence)

Hankow, June 17.—The scare in Hankow following the mutinies at Ichang and Wuchang is now passing and people are more at ease since the troops responsible for the mutinies and looting have either been punished with death or disbanded and sent home. The remnant of the rioters of Wuchang, numbering about 1,200, gave up their arms on the condition that they be sent home without punishment.

Hankow was spared, but only by paying $100,000 tribute to General Wang Chuan-yuan.

The serious problem confronting officials and sufferers here and those at Ichang is how best to formulate plans to cope with the disastrous situation and relieve the sufferers. The exact figures of damage done at Ichang and Wuchang are as yet unobtainable. The piece goods guild of Ichang announces in a Hankow paper that damages sustained by shops of that guild alone exceed 300,000 taels. The total loss of the Hupeh Government Bank and the Government Mint of Wuchang is also estimated at over $1,000,000.

FOREIGNERS SUFFER

Damage to foreign firms, according to a Japanese newspaper in Hankow, centers around $2,480,000, of which Japanese firms suffered most.

Mutiny sufferers of both Ichang and Wuchang have sent petitions to the Peking government holding General Wang Chuan-yuan responsible for the outbreaks and demanding indemnities.

The Wuchang Chamber of Commerce has also appealed to former President Li Yuan-hung, and former Premier Chow Shou-mow, both natives of Hupeh, and the National Associated Chamber of China, urging that measures be taken to right the wrongs done the people and merchants by militarists.

To make their plea for remedy and indemnities, mutiny sufferers of Wuchang have organised a Mutiny Sufferers United Society, in which practically all trade guilds and all other circles of Chinese society are represented. Several mass meetings were held at the Wuchang Manoeuvring Ground by people who have been made poor by the mutiny.

LIST OF DEMANDS

At a meeting held at Nan Low School, they decided upon the following demands: (1) Indemnities for damages done on properties, (2) that all bereaved families be liberally pensioned, (3) that rice supply be secured, (4) that official representatives be appointed to gather statics concerning damage, and (5) that strict supervision be exercised over distribution of government relief fund to mutiny sufferers.

Special officials have been appointed by General Wang Chuan-yuan to look after measures for mending up the situation at Ichang and Wuchang. General Wang himself has donated $19,000 for relief fund to these two places, but this does not appease the sufferers, as General Wang's property is conservatively estimated at $3,000,000.

Official investigation shows 48 persons were killed and 91 wounded during the Ichang mutiny. Concerning the Wuchang affair it puts the number of persons killed at 38 and those wounded at 75.

The U. S. S. Wilmington arrived in port from down river yesterday. On the occasion of its arrival, salutes were exchanged with other gunboats in port, but unfortunately the sound of the guns caused excitement in the native city where it was construed as the start of fresh trouble. Many Chinese gunboats have been despatched to Wuchang and Ichang to ward off further disturbances.

'OUST ME AND MY SYSTEM,' SINKIANG TUCHUN'S SLOGAN

Gen. Yang Tseng-hsin Advises Peking To Discard Provincial Chiefs

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, June 18.—General Yang Tseng-hsin, Tuchun of Sinkiang, is offering the Republic of China a national anthem for a reconstruction campaign and he asks the people regardless of station to join in the chorus, "Down with the Tuchuns."

Though a Tuchun himself General Yang is convinced that on the whole, the military governors are selfish and for the most part worthless and that as long as China has them, each one will be a "Little Old Man of the Sea" clinging to the back of the giant.

In his message to the Government General Yang hits straight from the shoulder and advises doing away with the Tuchuns. This can be done in a few well planned moves, he believes, the first to be the ousting of the occupation commissioners or secondary militarists.

Advertising Dep't Scores Big Scoop

Some hours after THE CHINA PRESS news hustlers had discarded their overalls and punched the old time clock last evening, and when the last remaining foreign editor in the shop had locked up his tools and was reaching for the bar of Grandpa's Wonder with which to remove the stains accumulated in the long night's tussle with verbs and adjectives and mixed metaphors and split infinitives, who should come strolling in from the composing room but Ah Sneeze, the No. 1 Chinese compositor, with some insignificant inquiry appertaining to the proper type for a certain insignificant want ad, and bearing in his hand a proof sheet of Page 9 of today's CHINA PRESS.

One glance at this proof sheet and the night editor detected that The China Press Advertising department had scored the Scoop, or as our English friends call it, the "beat" of the season.

There it was, all ready to go on the press—a clean knockout! Best story of the season! Better, even, than the story in yesterday's issue about the resolutions of the Health Protective Association, which was some item!

If you doubt it, turn to the first page of the advertising section, first and second columns.

MOSCOW SOVIET TO HELP CHITA DRIVE OUT JAPS

Definite Alliance To Be Announced Soon, Peking Hears

ARRESTS ARE PLANNED

Far Eastern Republic Plans To Precipitate Conflict, Report

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, June 18.—A definite alliance has been made between Chita and Moscow because of the situation in the Maritime province, it was reported today from Manchuli and secret information has reached the Russians in Harbin that the alliance will be openly proclaimed in a few days.

Wireless messages from Moscow have said that the Soviet Government will make an especially important announcement in a few days and this is taken in Manchuli and Harbin to have reference to Chita. While announcements concerning changes in Governmental methods are also expected, the coming announcement is believed to be connected with the Vladivostok overthrow and the menace to Chita.

Reports reaching Manchuli from Japan say that Japan has decided she cannot at present withdraw her troops from Siberia. This in connection with a statement from Semenoff to newspaper men that he now has the power to drive the Bolsheviks from the Far East, and reports from Chita of a mild mutiny of troops, is considered ominous.

Semenoff insists that he went to Vladivostok because he was asked to do so by several strong Russian political and business organisations. He declared that these organisations wanted him to head the new Government.

ONE INCIDENT

Japan has denied that she had any hand in the Vladivostok affair other than to prevent bloodshed and establish peace. Russians and Chinese in Harbin however, believe that a recent act there proves that Japan is more than an interested spectator. The Chinese was about to send fourteen Russians back to Transbaikalia. They were accused of disturbing the peace. All of them were reactionaries. They were already on their way when their friends appealed to the Japanese who took them from the train at Manchuli and then persuaded the Chinese to send them to the Maritime province.

The Japanese contended that if the men were sent into Bolshevist territory they would be put to death.

Because of the Japanese attitude and the general danger to Chita, the alliance with Moscow is now necessary it is said and as soon as it is arranged, Moscow will send troops to aid the Far Eastern Republic.

Chita, having failed to obtain a hearing in England of her complaints against Japan and convinced that her safety is menaced, has decided to do it alone and to take the consequences, according to information sent to Peking by Chinese observers in Chita and Vladivostok.

The Chita Government in brief has announced, according to this report, that she is going to arrest every Japanese military man found in the Far Eastern Republic and will arrest also such civilians as cannot give a good account of themselves.

WILLING TO TRY

It may be that the leaders in Chita and Moscow feel that the combined strength of the Soviet republic and the Far Eastern Republic can hold their own against the forces Japan can send against them, but this is doubted by those who have been in Siberia.

There is said however, to be hope in the present attitude of the Cossacks who are now opposing Attaman Semenoff. The Ussuri Cossack Administration has published a resolution saying it has separated from Semenoff. The resolution says Semenoff was made leader of the movement to oust communist control but that the orders he has given and the methods he has used have made it necessary to part from him. The presence of Semenoff in the new government will not be tolerated, the resolution says.

An intimation that help is coming to Chita is contained in a radiogram from Moscow to Manchuli that the Soviet Government is sending several of its general staff men to look over the situation in the Far Eastern Republic.

Must Salute New Superior Officer—His Wife

CAPTAIN James Baca, of Santa Fe, former Adjutant-General of the New Mexico National Guard, is now likely to be kept busy saluting his superior officer. He is a well-trained soldier, however, and especially under the circumstances doesn't need to be told that obedience is a soldier's first duty. For Mrs. Baca is now a full-fledged major in the military organisation, formerly headed by her husband. The new adjutant-general, upon taking office, found Mrs. Baca performing the duties of stenographer in the office. It didn't take him long to discover that she was not only a first-class stenographer but knew just a little bit more about running the office than anyone else in sight. So there was simply nothing to do but make her assistant adjutant-general with the rank of major. Mrs. Baca is the only woman national guard officer in New Mexico, if not in the United States.

FLOODS IN JAPAN CAUSING HEAVY LOSS; 180 DROWN

Forty Coal Mines Threatened, Crops Ruined, Hundreds Homeless

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Osaka, June 21.—Floods resulting from heavy rains in the Fukuoka district of Kyushu are growing more serious. The death-roll now numbers 180, while thousands of houses are flooded and hundreds have been carried away. Many bridges have been washed out, and forty coal mines are threatened as the Kyushu power stations are flooded and the current supplying the mine pumps cut off. Another three days' stoppage of the pumps may result in all the mines concerned being flooded and ruined.

Enormous damage has been done to the villages and farms of the affected region, and the crops in many places are ruined. Hundreds of persons are suffering from lack of food and shelter, and supplies for their relief are being rushed to the spot.

ADVOCATES OF BUND EXTENSION START PETITION

Change Of Sentiment Seen; Council Plan Gets Growing Support

TO WIDEN BRIDGE ALSO

New Buildings Call For More Street Room, Proponents Of Plan Say

A sharp veering of sentiment became apparent yesterday in connection with the project to widen the Bund by taking a strip of the Public Gardens when a petition appeared urging that the work be carried through in accordance with plans that have been outlined and published. The petition, which carries the signature of a number of influential ratepayers and property owners, is directed to the Municipal Council and denies that irreparable damage will be done to the gardens if the change is brought about.

Its those in favor of carrying out the plans for the Bund widening it is pointed out that the Garden Bridge and that part of the Bund that adjoins the gardens form a bottle-neck channel which traffic congests between the northern and southern portions of Shanghai. It is urged that the change contemplated means not only added facilities for the parking of automobiles in the particular section in which it is planned, but also vastly increased facilities for the movement of traffic by tram car, motor car, ricsha and by pedestrians between the Hongkew district and the southern portions of Shanghai.

The broad general scheme of the Municipal Council contemplates a widening of the waterfront thoroughfare as one means of relieving traffic congestion in the central portion of the city. To do this according to plans approved in the current budget a strip of approximately 60 feet of Public Gardens is to be [illegible] and as compensation for this it is planned to extend the gardens on the northern water front side with a strip of made ground approximately 125 feet in width at its widest end and narrowing to about 15 feet at the point where the gardens adjoin the bridge approach.

By this plan the thoroughfare will be widened throughout its length, as the widening of the southern portion south of Peking Road has been completed. To supplement the general plan the Garden Bridge is to be widened with new sidewalks supported by cantilevers, while the present sidewalks will be made to serve for ricsha traffic and the central roadway of the bridge will be left for the use of tram cars and automobiles.

It is emphasised by those who desire the work to proceed that by reason of the addition to be made to the Public Gardens no material change will be made in the area of the gardens and the question is raised whether the destruction of nine trees that must be felled to carry out the work is to halt a change that will be of direct benefit to thousands north and south of the bridge.

It is pointed out also that the erection on the Bund in the vicinity of the Public Gardens of a number of modern office buildings increases the need of extended traffic facilities on the thoroughfare.

Landlord Prefers Tenants With Children

ONE very seldom hears of a landlord who prefers to house a family with children rather than a single couple. But that is the unique hobby of E. W. Browning, New York's real estate king, owner of many apartment homes where tenants with children are more than welcome. Mr. Browning has more than 40,000 tenants throughout the city, and most of them have one or more youngsters. A great lover of children, and not blessed with any of his own, Mr. Browning has adopted two charming youngsters, with whom he is shown. We Cuss 'Wam Basu' Now But We'll Miss Him Bime By

BY ELSIE McCORMICK

Perhaps when we return to the country where tram-cars are trolleys and lifts are elevators, we will step out of the door some evening and shout "Wam-basu" down the dusky street. Then after waiting in vain for the answering call of "Missee," we will come to in a sudden pang of remembrance, turn sadly in the direction of the subway entrance and trust that the guard won't slam the door until at least two-thirds of us is inside.

All those remarks about absence making the heart grow fonder can be applied to the ricsha man like a mustard poultice. While he is with us, we think only of his abnormal appetite for coppers, his fondness for dragging us over choice bits of street repairing, and his habit of disappearing for chow just as we are all set to depart. But when we return home and begin to consult the taxi-cab schedules, we think with deep appreciation of the straw-hatted, brown-legged gentry of the highway who played horse for us as enthusiastically as a bachelor uncle does for his first nephew.

Most foreigners remember their first ricsha ride as well as they do the time they had their adenoids out. Ours took place in Japan. When we crawled into the one-seated vehicle and let the kumura man close us in with a black curtain, we had all the sensations of a corpse starting out at the head of a funeral procession. All we needed was a wreath.

UNWILLING MAN HUNTERS

On that premier excursion, we also had a glimpse of the social complications into which the gleeful ricsha man occasionally runs his patrons. Traveling with us were two very, very dignified ladies who are pillars in the American educational system. After trailing for many blocks what they thought were the ricshas of the party, the vehicles ahead stopped and the horrified ladies discovered that they had been following two perfectly strange men. On the sensations of the educators and the resulting tableau we drop a hasty curtain.

Someday a person with the social reputation of the Far East at heart is going to write a book on ricsha etiquette. Over in America there is a finishing-school where the young lady pupils spend patient hours learning to get in and out of a carriage gracefully. We are deficient in that branch of knowledge, as our chief need was learning how to get in and out of a pay-as-you-enter car gracefully and there isn't that kind of a school.

Anyway, we never have learned the proper way of wrapping a ricsha around us. Every time we get in, we catch ourselves on something, and when the top is down we have more trouble turning around than an athletic sardine in the bottom of the can. We have never gotten out of a covered one yet without causing our hat to eclipse at least one eye, and if we have an umbrella along, we always trip ourselves up. But then we are not entirely discouraged. It would be a lot worse if we lived in Soochow and had to ride on the donkeys.

HIS SIXTH SENSE

We don't know just how he acquires it, but it is indisputably true that the ricsha man of Shanghai has an uncanny sixth sense which would be a great asset to a trance medium or a milliner trying to guess the extent of a lady's bankroll before setting a price on a hat. The ricsha man can scent the tang of salt water about a griffin at a range of a hundred feet and revise his tariff upward according to the shortness of time that his victim has been on shore. He knows when payday falls due in every navy that parks its warships off the Public Gardens and can detect the various nuances of inebriation with the skill of an average Shanghai wife.

No mere newspaper in town can compete with him in his knowledge of church services, club meetings, missionary gatherings, or convivial parties. Every assemblage involving a score or more people finds that the ricsha coolie has somehow gotten wind of it and is ready to offer his services in appropriate numbers at the sound of the Amen or the playing of "Home, Sweet Home."

The first lesson that a newcomer learns about the chauffeur of a ricsha is that to pay him too much will bring forth a storm of imprecation louder than that which occurs at home when an East Side housewife tells the groceryman what she thought of his last basket of eggs. The second lesson is to beware of the coolie who airs a knowledge of English. He always expects an honorarium for the accomplishment and is capable of saying various unlovely things if the sum is denied. The third is that to name a hotel as one's destination labels a person as a griffin and means an increase in the rate.

THEIR HISTORY

The ricsha, which was introduced from Japan, made its debut here more than a generation ago. The original specimens, which were cosily tired in iron rims, promptly won the nom de guerre of boneshakers. A few of the early ruttiers are still on duty in the Chinese city, giving free osteopathic treatment to anybody brave enough to patronise them.

The number of ricsha licenses in the International Settlement is never in excess of 8,000, but in the French Concession, where there is no limit, there are at least 9,000 more. Most of the ricshas are owned by large companies which farm them out to contractors, who farm them out to sub-contractors, who rent them to coolies. The coolie usually becomes a contractor himself, letting out his vehicle at night to another

LLOYD GEORGE OPTIMISTIC AS HE OPENS EMPIRE MEET

Confident World Is "Settling Down" To Pre-War Basis

SIDESTEPS PACT

Pays Warm Tribute To Japs, But Avoids Treaty Renewal

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 20.—Mr. Lloyd George's speech at Downing Street today in welcoming the overseas members of the Imperial Conference was a comprehensive survey of foreign and Imperial relations. He began by dwelling on the overstrain and exhaustion which the nations of Europe were experiencing after the war. These, he said, were producing a state of feverish restlessness and a disinclination for steady labor, but the distress in Great Britain was not so bad as that which followed the Napoleonic wars. Indeed, despite the great amount of unemployment and much labor unrest, there was no actual privation. This, he contended, was largely to be attributed to the self-sacrifices of the well-to-do classes.

He was confident that the world was slowly settling down to face realities. An encouraging fact in the international situation was the increasing impatience with those who sought to keep the world in a state of turmoil and tension.

The two most troublesome problems of peace had been settled, including the disarmament of Germany. Though the irregular formations in Bavaria were still giving trouble, he believed that that difficulty would shortly be overcome. The other problem—that of reparation—had baffled all the financial experts for two years, but an expedient had now been devised, which, he said, "seems to have given satisfaction to moderate and practical men in Europe. So far as we are able to gather, that is also the view of the Dominions, which are also directly concerned in the matter." The Prime Minister expressed himself as most hopeful as regards the two remaining difficulties, viz., the fixation of the boundaries of Poland and the making of peace with Turkey. Until these had been settled it could not be said that peace had been established.

The first essential of peace and reconstruction, he declared, was that we should stand by the treaties. The nations of the world realised their interdependence more than ever before, and the League of Nations stood as the witness of such realisation. There might be some relaxations of the treaties here and there, following upon the discovery of (word missing-? oppressive) conditions, and with the consent of all parties, but the treaties must stand where such consent was not forthcoming.

One of the most urgent and important foreign questions, continued Mr. Lloyd George, concerned the relations of the Empire with the United States and Japan. There was no quarter of the world where we more greatly desired to maintain peace and fair-play among all nations, and to avoid the competition of armaments, than in the Pacific and Far East.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance had been a valuable factor in that direction. Japan had been a faithful ally, and rendered us valuable assistance at a time of critical need. The British Empire would not easily forget the fact that Japanese warships escorted the transports that brought the Australian and New Zealand forces to Europe when there were still German cruisers in the Indian and Pacific Oceans.

"We desire," he said, "to preserve the well-tried friendship, which has stood us both in good stead, and apply it to the solution of all questions in the Far East, where Japan has special interests, and where we ourselves, like the United States, desire equal opportunities and the open door.

"Not the least of these questions is the future of China, which looks to us and the United States for sympathetic treatment and fair play.

"No greater calamity could overtake the world than the further accentuation of the world's divisions upon racial lines. The British Empire has done signal service to humanity in bridging these divisions in the past, as the loyalty to our King-Emperors of Asiatic peoples is proof. To depart from that policy, to fail in that duty, would not merely greatly increase the dangers of international war; it would divide the British Empire against itself. Our foreign policy can never range itself upon differences of race and civilisation between East and West: it would be fatal to the Empire.

We look confidently to the Government and people of the United States for sympathy and understanding in this respect. Friendly co-operation with the United States is for us a cardinal principle, dictated equally by instinct, reason and commonsense. We desire to work with that great Republic everywhere in the world. Like it, we want stability and peace, based on liberty and justice. We desire to avoid the growth of armaments in the Pacific and elsewhere. We rejoice that American opinion is at present so earnest in that direction. We are ready to discuss with American statesmen any proposal for the limitation of armaments.

(A passage mutilated in transmission is here omitted.)

Proceeding, Mr. Lloyd George said he did not propose to deal in detail with the agenda of the Conference, remarking: "We have no cut-and-dried agenda. We will discuss that amongst ourselves."

The British Empire, he said, was making very satisfactory progress from the constitutional standpoint and in other ways. He mentioned among the changes which had come since the war Canada's decision to have its own Minister at Washington. This was a highly important development in which the British Cabinet had willingly co-operated.

In conclusion, Mr. Lloyd George emphasised that the British Dominions and the Indian Empire had played probably a greater part in the war for freedom than any nation except, perhaps, the very greatest Powers, and our mutual exertions constituted a testimony to British institutions which no other empire in history could approach or emulate. In recognition of their achievements, the British Dominions had been accepted fully into the comity of nations by the whole world. They had achieved full national status, and now stood beside the United Kingdom as equal partners in the dignities and responsibilities of the British Commonwealth.

"If there are means," he said, "whereby that status can be rendered even clearer to their own communities and to the world, we shall be glad to have them submitted to the Conference." He added that India's achievements had also been very great, and she had proved her right to the new status which she had acquired in the Imperial councils.

After the Prime Minister's speech the Conference adjourned till tomorrow. The meeting was held in the Cabinet room. The Prime Minister and members of the British Cabinet, including Mr. Churchill, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Montagu sat on one side of the table, and the representatives of the Dominions and India on the other.

London, June 21.—"Statesmanlike" is the unanimous verdict of this morning's newspapers in commenting on the Prime Minister's speech to the Imperial delegates yesterday. For once all parties are united under a single banner.

The papers contrast the Conference with the League of Nations as a peace-compelling institution and as a factor in world welfare. They point out that, excellent as are the League's ideals, it started out with a flourish of trumpets, and depends on a paper constitution, whereas the meetings of Empire statesmen are simple and devoid of ceremonies. The Britannic partnership has grown naturally along practical lines, and comprises many races, religions languages and cultures, and has already successfully emerged from the severest tests.

The Daily News refers to the Conference as "a movement pregnant with good for the whole of mankind." The Daily Chronicle emphasises that "the Empire is based on liberty," while the Morning Post describes the Conference as "a family party." All express the hope that the Conference will limit its agenda, concentrate on a few things, and do those well.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

Tsung Tsing, who constitutes a cog in the household mechanism at 133 Range Road, went out into the back room of the place Monday morning in the natural course of his duties and noticed that one of the large boxes stored therein was not effectively ranged. Giving it a casual heave in passing he nearly dislocated his shoulder.

Picking himself up and rubbing the outraged wing Tsung apostrophised the still unaligned receptacle in a few sparkling stanzas and bent upon it a malignant regard. There were no banana peels on the floor and he reflected that there was something unqualifiedly iniquitous about a measley wooden container of unimposing dimensions which could judo a normally destructive house servant onto his ear and sprain his wrist without even the creak of a hinge. By reason of many a previous survey Tsung was satisfied that the box was depressingly vacant. Bracing himself firmly he tugged tentatively at a corner. There was no more budge to the box than if it were spiked to the floor. With a final enlightening comment upon the evolution of cabinet workers and carpenters in general Tsung jerked back the lid—disclosing the neatly folded form of Tsang Ah-sing.

Tsung, the cook, the second cook, the coolie and the entire available strength of subsidiary coolies escorted Tsang to the corner policeman and delivered him over, with explanations and directions as to disposal. Somewhat in a daze, the constable deposited his charge in front of the desk sergeant, who, from the report turned in, couldn't decide whether to charge Tsang with impersonating a sardine or book him as a trespasser. So he sent a detective to get more details.

No, there wasn't a thing missing at 133. But next door, at 130 Range Road, Kyung Sung was proclaiming to the world that some unprincipled person had climbed an adjoining roof, prised up his window and eloped with three sets of b.v.d.s. And a few yards further down the street, at 129 Range Road, Ngan Kwe-sung was lamenting eloquently the loss of three cotton jackets, two pairs of silk pants and a straw hat and showing the neighbors the shattered remnants of the lock for the back door. From these indications the inmates of No. 133 drew the conclusion that if Tsung hadn't thrown himself out of gear on the box in the storeroom at the time he did, there would have been gaping discrepancies in the wardrobes at that establishment as well.

The detective went back and reported accordingly and they pealed all the missing items except the straw hat from Tsang's person, after removing his outer array.

In court yesterday Tsang nodded a gloomy admission to each indictment and after the list had been read through the Magistrate decided that his morning's industry entitled the prisoner to a year of indolence and that at its expiry he would be assigned to districts outside the Settlements, where early morning endeavor is so general that he will have to set his alarm clock several laps ahead to get away with anybody's habiliments.

The Waring Company

Last night the Waring company repeated, to a gratified audience, their previous successful presentation of "A Marriage of Convenience." Tonight the players will be seen in a composite bill of sketches which should show them to unusual advantage and provide at the same time a very pleasing evening's entertainment.

An announcement which will be received with much pleasure is that Mr. Waring, in response to popular demand, has decided to present again, on Friday evening, du Maurier's "Trilby." This presentation has proved more popular with local playgoers than any play which has been given here in some time, and if the number who were unable to gain admission on Monday night is any criterion Friday night's house will be filled to capacity.

The company's final performance is "Romeo and Juliet" on Monday next.

Many Coal Miners Returning To Work

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 20.—Miners are returning to work in considerable numbers in Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire, but reports from other areas do not indicate that the men are resuming work. The leaders are urging the men not to break away till the result of the Federation's appeal to the other unions is known.

London, June 21.—The possibility of ugly incidents in connection with miners returning to work has been anticipated by the Prime Minister, who has promised protection to those miners who wish to resume.

A large body of police was rushed up at Cannock Chase yesterday and prevented trouble, dispersing a hostile crowd of ten thousand who were waiting for 250 "black-legs" to leave the pits. Many other cases have been reported of handfuls of miners endeavoring to return to work and being prevented by powerful pickets amongst whom women were prominent in several districts.

Organisation Is First To Erect Building Without Outside Assistance

The Soochow Y.M.C.A., the first organisation of its kind in China which may boast of a home erected without outside financial help, has inaugurated a membership campaign to secure 1,000 new members and $20,000. The campaign is to last for a month, concluding on July 11. Returns announced last Saturday for the first week, show that prospects for a successful drive are brilliant.

Eight teams, consisting of the members of the gentry, educators, business men and students, are engaged in the work. Each team consists of a captain, two lieutenants and 15 workers. One of the teams will have an exclusive field in Shanghai. This is headed by Mr. T. M. Yui, a graduate of Cornell University who is a Soochow man. He will approach the Soochow residents in Shanghai on the association's behalf.

The Soochow Y.M.C.A. last year raised without foreign aid $40,000 for the erection of a modern building on a plot of land five mow in size, in the heart of the city. Within one month from today, it will be completed and its dedication will take place about the middle of September. The new home will also have a sanitary tea-shop which will be open to the public.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES HELD AT U. OF NANKING

Many Prominent Chinese And Foreign People See Large Class Graduates

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanking, June 20.—The eleventh annual commencement exercises of the University of Nanking were held this morning at the Sage Memorial Chapel. About a thousand people were present, among whom were Dr. C. T. Wang; Tuchun Chi Shih-yuan, H. E. Wang Hu, Civil Governor; Hon. Chien Tsung-kuo, speaker in the Kiangsu Assembly; Mr. John K. Davis, American Consul at Nanking; Mr. Hu Chia-chi, commissioner of education; Mr. Chang Shieh-heo, commissioner of industry; Dr. Rowe, president of the Nanking Theological Seminary; Mr. Wen Pei-shan; and Mr. Ing Zaung-teh, ex-professor of biology in the University.

Dr. A. J. Bowen, president of the University, gave a few short introductory remarks. After the singing of a patriotic hymn led by Rev. Treman and invocation by Mr. Wen Pei-shan, commissioner of foreign affairs at Nankin, Tuchun Chi Shih-yuan gave an address on the importance of knowledge—its value and depth. Mr. Wang Hu also spoke and emphasised that the Chinese ought to reward the United States for kindness in opening schools and promoting education in China.

Similar greetings were made by Mr Chien Tsung-kuo, and Mr. Hu Chia-chi, commissioner of education.

Mr. Davis, the American Consul representing the American community, expressed the hope that friendship between the two sister republics might be cemented by the graduates of the University. After the Consul's tribute, President Bowen introduced Dr. C. T. Wang, who spoke of man's important and superior place in the scheme of life and the need of every man having an ideal to work forward to. He urged upon the graduates an ideal of unselfish service for country and for mankind. He mentioned China's need for organising ability and expressed the hope that Nanking's graduates might aim to fill this need.

The prizes for the winning of the Inter-Collegiate Debating Association were given to Messrs. Yung Chia-yuan, Hsuing Tsiang-hsu, and Wei Wen-han, who unanimously defeated St. John's University last December, and to Messrs. Ch'en Kwei-chi, Chu Feng-chang, and Wei Hsioh-ren, who won the final championship of the debating association from the Shanghai College on May 5, at Shanghai.

B. S. Degrees were conferred as follows: Chang Nien-yuen, Chang Sih-yu, Ch'en Kwei-chi, Chow Ming-i, Li Chi-tung, Ling Kan, Shao Teh-hsing, and Ting Tso-chen.

The following men received the B. A. degree: Chen Heo-hwai, Che'en Tsung-cheo, Cheo Chia-shu, Chu Feng-chang, Fang Hsuin, Hsuing Ts'iang-hsu, Hwang Ren-ch'eh, Liu Chung-fu, Liu Shi-shi, Wang Hai-yuin, and Wei Wen-han.

There were 34 men graduated from the Junior College, three from the higher course and seven from the lower course of the school of education; 28 from the Middle School, and 46 from the Model School.

Upon the completion of the program, the faculty and graduates were entertained by the alumni at luncheon at Chiming-sz.

RICE IN HANKOW AT $10 A PICUL AND GOING UP

"Shortage Of Crop" Given As Reason—Refugees On Way There

(Staff Correspondence to the China Press)

Hankow, June 17.—The price of rice in Hankow has been on the increase for some time past, and has now approached the appalling figure of $10 per picul. In Hankow currency, this sum exchanges for about 16 thousand cash, or about 16 cash-notes. In Shanghai currency, the latter amount of copper cash means more than $11, hence the seriousness of the rice situation. In addition the price is still advancing owing to a combination of reasons.

The most conspicuous cause responsible for the rise is the shortage of rice supply from the rice-producing provinces of Hunan and Kiangsi. In Hunan there is a great famine comparable in the magnitude of disaster to the one existing in North China. Besides, there is a news in Hankow that over ten thousand famine refugees from Hunan province will soon arrive at Hankow, which has prompted many rice dealers to hold up their stocks for higher prices.

Famine in Hunan is reported to be increasing in intensity and the sufferings of the people are said to be unusually horrible. Recently at Siangtan, the second largest city in Hunan, a riot occurred in which over 3,000 civilians raided rice shops, and demanded rice at cheaper price.

Following the riot the next day, all shops put down their shutters and went on strike.

Boulon Witness In Another Suit Against G. W. W.

By agreement of counsel Mr. F. G. Boulon, former manager of the Shanghai branch of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, testified yesterday in the United States Court for China in the case of Tsu Sungtai versus Gaston, Williams & Wigmore. His testimony is taken at this time in advance of the trial as he is leaving this week for the United States.

In the suit damages in the sum of Tls. 18,000 are claimed for alleged non-delivery of a quantity of steel bars ordered on a contract that was signed by Mr. Boulon while he was manager of the Shanghai offices of Gaston, Williams and Wigmore. In his testimony yesterday Mr. Boulon reviewed the circumstances in connection with the making of the contract. The case is to be docketed for hearing in the next few days.

Chinese Woman's Club Maintains Nine Free Schools

The Shanghai Women's Club, composed of about a hundred Chinese ladies, has just completed the first year of its existence. Organised only last fall, it has already grown to include several departments and has undertaken social service work of an extensive character.

Meetings have been held monthly during the past year in homes and schools, current events all over the world and topics of special interest to Chinese women being the usual features of the program. Though the club year has closed, the Executive Committee will continue in session during the summer in order to plan a new program for the fall. It is already decided that the first meeting of the new season, to take place in September, will be especially in the interest of children. Arrangements are in the hands of Mrs. T. C. Chu, chairman of the Program Committee.

The Social Service Department of the club, which was formerly the Social Service League of Shanghai, is supporting nine free schools at an approximate expense of $400 annually for each of them. Beside the usual primary subjects, the children are taught plain sewing, embroidery, and other handicrafts. Approximately 300 pupils are enrolled, a number of whom demonstrated their ability in a program of dialogues and plays at an entertainment given for the club recently at 31 Hankow Road. Though the department has thus far confined its attention to educational matters, it has other subjects in prospect.

During the year the club has had several open meetings, one of the most important of which was in honor of Mrs. Frederick Stevens. The organisation was entertained by both the American Woman's Club and the British Women's Association, later reciprocating by holding an "At Home" at 17 Arsenal Road. The last meeting of the year was held at St. Mary's Hall, which extended hospitality to the club and for which the club expresses its appreciation.

QUAKE PICTURES WILL BE SHOWN HERE TUESDAY

Scenes Of Destruction In Kansu To Be Pictured At Olympic

The screening of the Kansu earthquake pictures, which have aroused great interest in Shanghai since Mr. Hall brought them here from Peking, will take place at the Olympic Theater on Tuesday night, June 28, at 9:15 p.m. These pictures illustrating the destruction and unique changes in the configuration and even geography of a large area of Western Kansu province were taken by the Rev. John D. Hayes and Mr. Josef W. Hall, of the Kansu earthquake relief expedition sent out by the Peking United International Relief Committee.

The showing will be enlivened by local talent, in the shape of a drawing-room act which is under the direction of Mr. E. P. Graham-Barrow. The inclusion of this feature assures an evening of high entertainment as well as of unusual instruction.

The Kansu catastrophe, undoubtedly the greatest seismic disturbance in scientific history, is replete with dramatic and human interest as well as scientific interest. Mr. Hall has gathered the stories of individual quake victims and refugees which are as thrilling as Jules Verne's trip to the moon—and which would undoubtedly be classed with this type of fiction had he not the pictorial proof.

The only survivors, for instance, of one entire valley in one section—which the investigators named the "Valley of the Dead"—are a peasant and his two sons whose farmstead was caught up by one of the streams of flowing loess and carried upon the back of the slide for a mile. This slide then met two converging slides from the opposite direction, which pushed the farmstead, strawstacks, orchard and threshing floor intact, another half mile up a side valley. The slides all occurred in a few seconds of time, and the rate of speed at which the survivors were carried must have been inconceivable.

The pictures are being shown here under the auspices of the Chinese Foreign Famine Relief Society. They were shown by Messrs. Hall and Hayes in Peking under the auspices of the United International Relief Committee and of Minister Charles R. Crane, and were appreciated there to such an extent that a second showing has been asked for. The Peking Pavillion was crowded and many would-be spectators were turned away. Booking for next Tuesday's showing at the Olympic is at Moutrie's.

'Wam Basu' Will Be Missed Bime By

coolie who often hires a subordinate to haul the chariot during the least profitable hours. It is on the general principle of the bugs that have smaller bugs to bite 'em.

The ricsha man of Japan is an aristocrat compared to his brother in China. We have been hauled about in Tokio by a gentleman wearing spectacles and a black silk suit, with a white handkerchief peeking daintily from an upstairs pocket. During the period of bloated finance immediately following the war, it was by no means unusual to see a Japanese ricsha coolie sprinting down the street with a fox fur slung artlessly around his neck. If a Chinese coolie were observed with that specie of decoration, it would involve a free trip to the Mixed Court and a story on his part about the fur having dropped on him from an upstairs window.

In Canton, the city government has passed an ordinance gradually reducing the number of ricsha licenses until they are entirely eliminated. Their contention is that the ricsha lowers man to the status of a draft animal and has the effect of lessening the dignity of human life for both the puller and his patron. Undoubtedly their stand is the right one, but somehow the ricsha coolie, with his ready gift of repartee, the cigarette he has plucked from under somebody's heel, and the jaunty angle of his unblocked straw hat does not seem to be suffering from any sense of self-depreciation. If you think he is a down-trodden worm, just pay him three cents too little or twenty cents too much.

SHANGHAI AND CHANDLER NINES BEATEN BY 1ST AND 2ND SECTION OF FLOTILLA

Chandler Lose 10-inning Gam e 9-7; Locals, Unable To Hit Navy Twirler, Defeated 2-0; Doubleheader Scheduled Today

The first and second sections of the 13th destroyer flotilla won their games yesterday afternoon from the nines representing the U.S.S. Chandler and the Shanghai Baseball club. The scores were 9-7, and 2-0, respectively. The Chandler-1st Section game went ten innings; the Shanghai-2nd Section game went nine.

Shanghai lost its game yesterday because of that old weakness: an inability to hit. The local men got but two clean singles, one by Hopkins and one by Hendrickson. The two other hits shown in the box score were the morest scratches. Shanghai could never have won against that 2nd Section nine without a batting rally, for the navy men were playing a tight and clever game.

Hopkins, for the destroyer men pitched real shut-out ball. He fanned 13 batsmen. Only twice did the local men get the ball well out of the diamond, except for that said pair of safeties and a weak little Texas Leaguer by Bills. The hit accredited to Wilhoit was a kind of a bunt toward third which he beat out for a useless life.

Merrill, as usual pitched a good keen game, fanning nine Navy men himself, but then in the fifth he let loose a half wild pitch, which Bristow made half an effort to stop, using only half of his hands. The base runners, Swihart and Meade each took an extra base on the ball, and a single over Bills by Sailor Smith started the scoring. Swihart came in safely, Meade was caught at the plate on a nice throw in from center by Cable Co. Smith. Fisher fanned, and then Merrill made a bad throw to first of Hopkins grounder, letting the next run in. Bennett was thrown out easily by Bills.

Shanghai almost scored a run in the fourth frame, when Hopkins got on through a nice single, took second on Crow's sacrifice, and then tried to score from the middle sack on a passed ball. He covered the ground in good style, but he couldn't make it. He was thrown out from the grandstand, Murrah to Sailor Hopkins.

In the fifth S. F. Smith got to first on a dropped third strike, his second fan-out, by the way. He took another base on Wilhoit's bunt, and Bristow sacrificed him to third. But then the old inability to hit him and Wilhoit in killed the chance. The next five men at bat fanned.

HOW 1st. SECTION WON

The game between the Chandler and the 1st Section was a nip and tuck thing for ten anxious innings. Fielding, hitting and scoring honors were about even up until the last frame. Ward was pitching strong baseball in the first innings. He fanned 14 men and walked none. But the 1st Section men seemed to get to him later. Five hits in the last three innings netted five runs.

The Chandler team got their start in the second on a hit by Tyler, an out, a dropped fly in left, and a fielder's choice, which put one run over. In the third Curry stopped one with the small of his back, was sacrificed to second, stole third cleanly and continued on home on Duvall's bad handling of Whalen's throw.

The 1st Section scored four in the fourth on Olansen's single Bates out, Britton hit by pitched ball, Duvall's sacrifice, a single by Fisher and a double by Whalen. The Chandler came back in the seventh with two more tallies resulting from Ward's single, Taggert's fumble of Britton's throw on the steal, Curry's and Dunlap's singles, and Kennith's out at first. The 1st Section's two in the eighth had behind them a double by Britton, Duvall's life on a fielder's choice and Lane's fast hit through Northrup. The Chandler in their half of the eighth had pushed a run over on Tyler's pass, Taylor's out and Northrup's hit.

The two teams went into the extra inning thing tied up in the score at 6-6, with Shanghai and the 2nd Section nines anxious to get their own game going, and the time flying fast. It was then 5:25 p.m. Runs happened suddenly and plentifully in that last frame. The Chandler got one when Sheedy singled and raced on Northrup's double to center.

It had all the appearance of a 7-6 win for the destroyer, until the 1st Section men got going in their half. Britton drove one at Northrup who had him pegged out until Kennith dropped the ball. Duvall bounced a little one to Moorhead, who was afraid to throw it. Fisher then popped a Texas Leaguer out on the left field foul line and Whalen drove

Boojum Followed Roughtown Champ Around Like A Shadow On Rainy Day

BY 'BUGS' BAER

Dear Publication—You don't seem to memorise when my knuckle thrower, Backjack Boojum, slapped Gink into the royal suite at Matteawan. Blackjack tapped him right on the Chu-Chin-Chow and Gink went out like a sunset. Two weeks later, Gink was found in a Hindoo Garden with a harp in his hand, sipping nectar through a silk lined straw.

Yours excessively,
BERT HANLON.

Summer address: Bleachers, Polo Grounds.

To those who know the forged facts in the case, this is the most adenoiding letter of all. This beezark by the name of Boojum never got by the gigantic beetles that used to guard Roughtown against hostile reformers. At the time Boojum was supposed to have been in Roughtown the Mayor had called a congratulatory assembly of citizens to protest against the proposed tax on brains. He claimed that taxation without representation was tyranny. An the citizens applauded him to the last overripe tomato.

When speaking of Roughtown you want to remember that under the Tuesday municipal charter there was a Greater Roughtown. Also East, West, North and South Roughtown. Not to mention the suburbs and glass optical garages. The town was divided into sectors just like any other war. Roughtown was the place that good old Charley Case used to talk about. Charley used to chirp of his father getting umbrageous because a wildish lion chased him one day. He bought a big gun to shoot it. But then he decided not to shoot the lion, because it might be a neighbor's lion.

TOWN SEPARATED

The town separated like sweethearts at a railroad station, because South Roughtown wanted Roughtown River lined with wallpaper to attract tourists. East Roughtown squawked plentiful at this, as the Cantonese laundrymen were using the bed of the river to dry their clothes in. North Roughtown passed a bill making rain compulsory.

The last time it had rained in Roughtown Geronimo got his feet wet. At low tide the river was dry. At high tide it was very dry. Fish used to walk around Roughtown to avoid the river, which had run east and west bank like other rivers, but no sauce. In Spring freshets Roughtown folks used to stand in the middle of the river to avoid the flood.

ELECTION DAY RIOTS

Little things like this divided the peaceful little hamlet against itself, but the folks always got together in election day riots. Boojum eased into town on Election Day. The Roughtown champ was busy all day voting. He was leading himself by 4,000 majority. There were 10,000 voters in the burg. Exactly 20,001 votes were cast. The Mayor claimed that the extra one vote showed that some unprincipaled bum had voted three times.

Gink and Boojum met in the aisle of the abbatoir arena and Gink knocked Boojum right into the path-finding wagon of a fourteen carriage funeral procession. Then he went into inactive training for The Glutt.

RUTH WANTS TO MEET KELLY IN WORLD'S SERIES

Babe Views Clash Of Home-Run Sluggers With Enthusiasm

BY BABE RUTH

Since George Kelly, the big slugger of the New York Giants, has begun to write his name in bold characters on the page of baseball's fame, fans have asked me if I am at all envious of this new hero, or if I fear for my crown at his hands. With real emphasis I answer "No" to both questions.

Kelly is welcome to hit all the home runs he possibly can and if I am not able to beat him at his own game, then the fault is mine and not his. No athlete has any real right to be jealous of another. I certainly enjoyed my wonderful success of the past two years and I look forward to even a better year in 1921. Once more I repeat what I have said on several occasions: All I want is for the pitchers to keep that ball over the plate. I'll do the rest.

With reference to Kelly and his sudden spurt to home run fame, I may say that there is nothing surprising in his feat. He is a big fellow with good shoulders and strong arms. When he gets a hold of the ball it figures to go pretty far. Last year he did not rank so high in the batting averages but that means nothing. In 1916 I hit only .272 for Boston but I have never been below the .300 mark since then. I was many points to the good on the charmed notch last summer and with good luck this year I hope for a .400 year. Sisler had one last year, now it is my turn.

It would be remarkable if Kelly went along hitting home runs throughout the season and I broke my record of last year, if we would meet in the world's series on the Polo grounds. I guess that wouldn't have the bugs steamed up. Can't you imagine the fans pouring into New York for the occasion? We might even follow the example of the old clubs that toured the country playing the world's series. I like that idea the financial possibilities appea to me.

Danger Of 'Safety First' Methods In Golf

BY ABE MITCHELL

Tactics enter into golf both in regard to stroke and match play, but the first-class player always finds it exceptionally difficult to bring himself to abandon the shot which he knows to be the right one in order to escape any possible danger. This fact was impressed on me during the tournament at Cooden Beach. I heard whispers of the professiona's' bad judgment, of his readiness to take risks which could not be justified. On the face of it this criticism may have appeared sound but from experience the professional has learnt that there is nothing more harmful to his game than a "safety first" policy. If he cultivates this habit he is not likely to make much advance. It is the old story of nothing attempted nothing done.

There is a most intriguing one-shot hole at Cooden. From tee to flag the distance was about 150 yards and in the prevailing wind it could be covered with an easy iron shot. The green was wide enough and there was nothing fearsome about the traps. But the pin is so placed that the wing hazard on the left almost cut into the straight line. Thus was set a nice problem and, in my opinion, it was to their credit that most of the players tried to solve it without shirking the difficulty.

TAKING THE RISK

To get on to the green by playing to the right was easy. That it was said, was what we should have done, and then have obtained the three by two putts. Perhaps these critics were right and it was foolish for us to run the risk of being caught in the bunker, but as I have said most of us have disciplined ourselves to go out for the shot and the principle is not lightly broken down. I confess that there were probably more fours at this hole than threes. The tendency was for the shot to go too far to the left and if you were not trapped an exceedingly difficult pitch back over the bunker was left. Duncan had this shot to play on his first round and very wisely he took his iron and ran the ball up the face of the hazard. On my first round I was bunkered but I was fortunate enough to pitch out near enough to the hole to get down in one putt. At the second attempt I judged the shot so well that as I saw the ball trickle up to the flag I thought I was going to be fined a bottle of whiskey. It was a very narrow shave from a one. I do not cite my own experience at this hole to justify my method of playing it, though a three and a two were flattering results. Even if I had taken two fours I know I should find it extremely hard merely to aim for the green without regard to the position of the flag.

Another hole at Cooden caused some discussion. This was the fifteenth, where a water dyke bites into the fairway and it is intended that the route taken should be slightly dog-legged. For the long hitter particularly if he could get a bit of pull on to the ball, there was not much advantage to be gained by going out for the carry, for by going the long way round he could still reach the green off his drive with an iron. It was at this hole that Duncan put two balls over the dyke and out of bounds. For this he was criticised. The risk he took, it was said, was not worth while. That was true in a sense, but Duncan did not believe that he was taking any risk. He thought that the drive over the dyke, despite the troublesome cross wind, was well within his powers. That this was so he proved next day when he carried fifty yards over the water and finished eighty yards beyond. The result was that he was able to pitch on to the green with his mashie niblick. Then why did he put two balls out of bounds the previous day? you may ask. Simply because in each case he half hit his drive.

DANGER OF LETTING UP

There is nothing more dangerous than playing for safety, particularly when it is done to preserve a lead. An amateur told me the other day that in a match which he was very anxious to win he reached the turn four up. At this point he said to himself: "If I only halve the next few holes I am bound to win." Off the next tee he topped his drive into a bunker; at the next he hooked a brassie; he was trapped again from the tee at twelfth and at the thirteenth he took three putts. Hey Presto, his lead had gone. Not only that but his play went from bad to worse and in the end he was beaten in a most melancholy way.

You cannot trifle with golf. No lead is too big to hold, and if you once "let up," as the American would say, you will experience the utmost difficulty in getting back to your form. One competitor in last season's Amateur championship at Muirfield lost every hole and was beaten eight and ten. That was truly harsh treatment, but whilst his opponent with his good sense of sportsmanship would have been willing to halve a hole or two, he knew the danger of relaxing his efforts. My advice is to go out for the shot if it is on and you believe you have a chance of accomplishing it. Of course it is the height of folly to attempt a stroke that you are conscious is beyond you. For instance one sees the amateur take a brassie when the lie is not good enough, though it is certain that he cannot get up with the club. In such circumstances it is wise to recognise the bad lie and pocket one's pride as it were and use an iron. You will still be as well off even if the brassie shot is successful.

But to be ambitious at golf is not a bad fault and it is perhaps better to over-estimate than underestimate one's capabilities. The pawky player who never goes out for anything and whose chief aim is to keep dead down the middle is a difficult opponent, but I am sure that he misses a great deal of the enjoyment to be derived from the game.

SURREY ELEVEN LIKELY TO BEAT AUSTRALIANS

Have 9 Wickets In Which To Get Only 162 Runs

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 20.—The match between the Australians and Surrey was resumed at the Oval today in cool and cloudy weather, before an attendance numbering some 14,000 spectators, and on a fast wicket.

Surrey, whose first innings score stood at 85 for five wickets when stumps were drawn on Saturday, brought it to 175, Ducat contributing 47 in good and easy style.

In their second innings the Australians showed only poor form and were dismissed for 158, Mayne being top scorer with 48. Hitch took five wickets for 44, and Fender four for 44.

Surrey, going in a second time, had made 35 for one wicket before stumps were drawn. They now require 162 runs to win the match.

In other first-class matches concluded today, Yorkshire beat Warwickshire by an innings and 140 runs, and Derbyshire beat Glamorganshire by two wickets.

In the latter match Bestwick, Derbyshire, secured all ten wickets in Glamorganshire's second innings for 40 runs. Such a feat was last performed by Drake, playing for Yorkshire against Somersetshire at Weston-super-Mare in 1914.

CHAMPIONS IN ALL LINES OF SPORTS ARE NOTED FOR THE PUNCH THEY CAN LAND

Bobby Jones In Golf, McLoughlin In Tennis, Babe Ruth In Baseball And Long List Of Fighters, Bear Out Edgren's Contention

BY ROBERT EDGREN

There's no denying it—the punch wins.

Not only in the ring, but in any sport it is the man with the punch who makes good.

Take golf, Bobbie Jones who has been playing a remarkable game these past few months, is driving as far as any amateur in the country. The "punch" puts him near enough to the green to get in his skilful approaches and his well calculated putts.

I have often watched Leo Diegel, the great professional who has a habit of breaking course records wherever he plays. Diegel is a tremendous driver—perhaps the longest driver in America. He hits a tremendous iron too, and drops his long appraches "dead to the pin." The punch wins many a match for him.

In tennis, Maurice McLoughlin, when at his best, was famous for terrific punch he puts into his service and returns. In nearly every game McLoughlin broke one or two racquets—smashing them by the tremendous power he put into hitting the ball. A tennis racquet is a strong, well made implement. It would seem impossible to break it by hitting such a light, elastic object as a tennis ball, which would seem to offer little more resistance than a soap bubble. But McLoughlin did it. McLoughlin has taken up golf instead of tennis this past year or two, and is playing a strong game. It's said he occasionally cracks a driver shaft by putting the same wrist power in his drive that he uses in a tennis stroke.

Babe Ruth is the greatest home-run hitter ever known in baseball. Babe has the "punch." When he goes to bat the fielders retire to the fence. This year Babe has a cinch. He can hit them out to the limit, and he has practiced control of short infield hits, so that he can play them "where the infielders ain't." Very puzzling to the opposition. Ruth uses the heaviest bat in baseball. When he wallops, he puts all of his great beef into the blow.

It's the same when Babe is playing golf, which is his favorite sport outside of his profession. At the toe he takes a full swing, with all his might, and the ball sails fairly out of sight. I've seen Babe swat them for a 250-yard carry. Some hook and some slice, but when one goes straight, it's a wonderful ball to look at.

MANAGEMENT OF AMUSEMENT PARK STARTS EXCHANGE

Restrictions to be imposed by Peking on the new trust companies in Shanghai are being sought by many influential residents here. The latest addition to the already large circle of exchange and trust companies is what is known as the "Exchange for Night Business," with head offices at 700 Avenue Edward VII.

The business to be carried on by the exchange is an amusement park enterprise and the head of one of the local amusement parks leads the list of promoters of the new adventure, which is capitalised at $1,000,000. A number of Chinese newspapermen are also said to be interested in it.

The management of another amusement park is starting out with a similar institution.

The local Chinese papers have been full of advertisements inserted by such exchanges recently. The script is said to be selling at prices much above face value.

AD CLUB OUTING IS NEXT SUNDAY

Members of the Advertising Club of China and their friends will be the guests of Mr. Kan Chu Nam, general manager of the Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Co., at his home on Sinza Road Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

The spacious grounds comprising 70 mow of park, garden and lawns will be devoted to outdoor games, entertainment, music, dancing, etc., while refreshments will be served on the lawn.

The invitations are complimentary but admission will be by ticket only, to be secured from the chairman of the committee on arrangements, Mr. J. A. Dismeyer, at the British American Tobacco Co. Each member is limited to one guest. The program will be announced later in the week.

Junk Attacked By Wenchow Pirates

Another lumber junk, belonging to the Sien Sung and Mow Chong lumber shops, has been attacked by pirates near Wenchow, the attackers carrying away a member of the crew to be held for ransom. The local Ningpo Guild has requested the Tuchun of Chekiang to take steps for the arrest of the criminals and release of the captives and for putting a stop to the increasing number of these depredations.

LIGHT WEIGHT COINS

The question of lightweight and spurious copper coins is still actively engaging the attention of local officials. It is reported in the Chinese press that the local Military Governor has received word from the Civil Governor of the province to the effect that certain individuals are bringing huge quantities of the light weight coins into Shanghai, where they are disposing of them to exchange shops at a ten percent discount.

Also that smugglers are bringing in many counterfeit which they are disposing of at discounts of from 30 to 40 percent. The Civil Governor requests that measures be more strictly enforced to put a stop to these importations and to bring the offenders to book.

German—French Representatives To Talk Reparations

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 15.—The exchange of views between M. Loucheur, the French Minister of Liberated Regions and Reparations, and Herr Rathenau, German Minister of Reconstruction, with respect to the all-important problem of reparations is to be resumed in Paris shortly. Paris and Berlin opinions consider the first results as decidedly favorable. French political circles almost unanimously approve the Government's move which is said to be bearing the mark of realisation and is, as a matter of fact, the policy which M. Briand advocated upon assuming the Premiership.

Peking, June 19.—Mr. Pien Shou-cheng, chairman of the Chihli Provincial Assembly, has been sent to Nanking to ascertain the view of General Chi Hsien-yuan, the Tuchun of Kiangsu, on the situation in Kiangsu.

Champs In All Lines Noted For The Punch

has a remarkable punch. No other kind of punch would have dropped Fred Fulton in 14 3-5 seconds. Carl Morris with the first blow struck, and Jess Willard before the fight at Toledo was a minute on its way. Of course, Dempsey is a skilful boxer, with an original puzzling style, but cleverness alone wouldn't have made him king of the heavyweights against the kind of opposition he met.

Dempsey always tries to win from the moment the first bell rings. He doesn't stall. His ambition is to get a clean opening, and then "sock." There's something suggestive in the sound of that word. Jack Kearns coined it to describe Dempsey's peculiar way of hitting. When he hits, Dempsey throws everything into the punch, from the tendons that lift his heels to the drive of his big forearm and powerful wrist. He doesn't draw back his arm to deliver a blow, but he holds it poised in the position from which he can hit with every ounce of power he has. He socks—that's all there is to it.

Carpentier is a very heavy hitter, too. He has won many fights with a well-placed punch. He dropped Beckett, the English champion, with a clean, knockout right-hander on the chin when Beckett was rushing him.

He knocked out Bombadier Wells with a crashing body blow and a finishing blow on the jaw as Wells' hands dropped.

When a boy of 18, and a middleweight, he knocked rugged Joe Jeanette down for a nine-second count in the first round of their fight in France. Jeanette says Langford never hit him as hard. It is this knack of hitting a crashing blow, allied to superb boxing skill and dashing speed, that will make Carpentier a dangerous opponent for Dempsey when the two meet in New Jersey, July 2.

Johnny Wilson isn't the cleverest middle-weight who ever held the championship, but he has a trick of hard, accurate hitting, especially in the body. It will take a great middle-weight to beat him, and I notice that Wilson isn't being challenged by every hopeful would-be contender the way he was before he whipped Mike O'Dowd the second time in Madison Square Garden. They've discovered that Wilson has the "punch" and so isn't by any means the easy mark he was supposed to be.

Among the old time champions it was invariably the man with the punch who became famous. Terry McGovern was greatest of all feather-weights. He was a fighting whirlwind of flying fists, and when he landed something dropped.

Joe Gans was a very hard hitter especially when countering.

Little George Dixon, for many years feather-weight champion, had a great punch combined with remarkable speed and skill.

Dal Hawkins could knock a man out with a left hook that traveled only a few inches.

Tommy Ryan and Kid McCoy were superlatively skilful, and could hit hard.

Young Griffo was the cleverest boxer in the world, but never got into the championship class because he lacked hitting ability.

Joe Walcott, known as the "Giant-Killer," was only 5 ft. 1 inch tall and weighed only 142 pounds, but he had a kick like an army mule, in either hand.

Sam Langford, when he was a welter-weight, was the greatest hitter of his size in the world.

Stanley Ketchel dropped even big Jack Johnson with a right-hand hook behind the ear, and knocked out many men in his own class in the most sensational style.

Bob Fitzsimmons was the greatest fighter of his day, in any class. Bob had a knockout punch left even when badly dazed and apparently beaten, as Ruhlin, Sharkey and many others learned.

JEFFRIES TERRIFIC HITTER

Jim Jeffries was a terrific hitter. The only reason several of Jeff's battles went to a decision was that the big fellow always feared to use his whole strength. Naturally mild tempered and confident in his ability to win, he seldom extended himself to the limit until it became necessary.

Jim Corbett was a remarkable boxer, but the poorest of heavyweight champions because he lost his punch after a few good fights. Against men who could punch, like Fitzsimmons, Sharkey and Jeffries, he had little chance.

You might say that some wrestlers have had a "punch," comparatively speaking. Hackenschmidt could use his great strength in one sudden effort—which is the same thing.

The "punch," too, has made many athletic champions. John Flanagan and Matt McGrath and Pat Ryan with the hammer relied on concentrating every nerve in one record-breaking heave. Ralph Rose and Pat McDonald could always get in one tremendous shot put. Martin Sheridan could add several yards to a discus throw on his last trial when he was behind in a competition.

Any man who ever won a championship, at anything, had something like a "punch" to put into his work. And there never was a punchless champion yet.

knows all that there is to be known about food values and stimulant values. There is the centre (probably the world centre) of cultured scientific study of how to keep life alive and how to keep life healthy.

An agent for Haig & Haig who trades extensively in the West End of London informs us that not many weeks pass without orders coming from Harley Street doctors for our whisky.

They know what they are doing. Life can be saved (and often is saved) by the timely use of fine stimulant.

When "control" is banished in the Home Market the price of Haig & Haig Whisky will be higher there than other Whiskies. In all uncontrolled markets the higher price is now being paid. That is one of the reasons why Haig & Haig is a scarce commodity in the Home Market.

Science Finds the "Manna" Which Fed the Children of Israel

Very Interesting Confirmation of the Scriptural Story in the Discovery That a Delicious, Sweet, Nourishing Food Really Does Fall from the Sky in the Palestine Wilderness Just as the Bible Says

A Plant Known as "Manna," Found in the Sinaitic Desert, According to Professor Peloubet, but Scientists Have Now Found That It Was Another Plant—a Kind of Fungus —on Which the Israelites Fed 3,000 Years Ago.

Numbers, Chap. XI., vs. 5-30.

5. We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions and the garlick:

6. But now our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes.

7. And the manna was as coriander seed, and the colour thereof as the colour of bdellium.

8. And the people went about, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9. And when the dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.

10. Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent: and the anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

18. And the LORD said unto Moses, say thou unto the people, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19. Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20. But even a whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before Him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

31. And there went forth a wind from the LORD, and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth.

32. And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten homers: and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

The Children of Israel Complained of the Tiresome Diet of Manna, and God, Listening to Their Protests, Sent a Great Wind from the Sea Which Brought Them Quails Which They Caught and Ate.

WHAT was this "manna" the Israelites ate?

Was there such a food as "manna," and was it miraculous in its origin?

Science is able to confirm the Scriptural story of the food which saved the children of Israel and to explain the astonishing statement that it came down from heaven like rain.

Of its edible quality we may have a chance to judge for ourselves, inasmuch as the American Consul at Jerusalem, Oscar S. Heizer, has forwarded a sample to the Department of Commerce at Washington, with a suggestion that the stuff might be obtained in commercial quantities, for sale in this country, from merchants in Mosul and Bagdad.

He says that in these modern days manna is found in upper Mesopotamia and Kurdistan—the same wonderful and seemingly miraculous food which sustained the children of Israel during their wanderings in the wilderness. "It falls" —so he states—"in the form of dew, which hardens and assumes the shape of a grain." When gathered, it is stored for Winter use, or shipped to Bagdad for sale in the markets.

In Bagdad and Mosul the manna is cooked with sugar and made into little round white cakes three inches in diameter and half an inch thick, with a sprinkling of wheat flour on the outside. These are sold as candy by street vendors, and are much esteemed by Europeans, as well as by the natives, for their delicate aromatic flavor.

It is cakes of this kind that have been forwarded by Consul Heizer to the Department of Commerce as a sample.

This is indeed the very same manna which kept alive the children of Israel in the wilderness. Science now knows that this remarkable foodstuff, which was the veritable manna of the Bible, is in reality a kind of lichen—a humble plant which forms wrinkled and warty crusts on stones and rocks. On the outside its color is grayish yellow, but, when broken, the interior is white as a crushed grain of wheat.

As it gets older it loosens its grip on the rock, its edges roll back, and soon it becomes detached altogether, forming a rounded body with a central cavity. It is feather-light, and the slightest breeze will blow it hither and thither.

Thus it often happens that a wind-storm carries great quantities of these lichens long distances, and afterward they are found piled in heaps and windrows. It appears as if they have fallen out of the sky, and ignorant people assign to the phenomenon a supernatural cause.

In the desert regions where these lichens grow, heavy rains usually follow a long dry season. Rivulets wash quantities of them into depressions in the ground, and subsequent evaporation of the water leaves heaps of them behind. The superstitious natives consider such a happening miraculous.

Great "rains" of manna are recorded as having occurred in 1824, in 1828, in 1841, in 1846, in 1863, and in 1864. All of them arrived, it is noticed, between January and March, the season of heaviest rainfall in the regions where the lichen grows. This circumstance is at least suggestive; but the inhabitants were in each instance fully persuaded that the manna dropped from heaven.

Manna "rains" occur not infrequently in the steppes and deserts of Armenia, the Caucasus, Persia, Kurdistan, Arabia and northern Africa. Since prehistoric times they have furnished food for man and beast in seasons of scarcity. This is especially the case in the highlands of southwestern Asia, where manna is used as a substitute for wheat in years of famine, being ground in the same way and baked into bread.

So plentiful is the supply obtainable on occasions that one man in a day can collect from 12,000 to 20,000 pieces of manna (five to eight pounds), varying from the size of a pea to that of a Brazil nut. Their average weight is about one-third of a dram.

The lichen growing on a rock derives its water supply from the atmosphere. It can absorb from that source 35 per cent of its weight in three days. On the other hand, it surrenders moisture with equal rapidity; and, by the time it is ready to detach itself, it is almost absolutely dry. Hence its remarkable lightness.

Only small quantities of manna are found nowadays in the region traversed by the Israelites on their journey from Egypt to Palestine—a fact which botanical experts are inclined to attribute to a radical change in vegetation that has since taken place. In the days of the Exodus vast tamarisk forests covered most of the "wilderness" spoken of in the Bible. These forests have been destroyed by the Arabs, largely for the production of charcoal, and the territory has become desert and desolate.

As the Bible tells us, Moses and his people wandered for forty long years before they finally reached the "land of Canaan."

After they had crossed the Red Sea, Moses and his people found themselves in the Sinai Peninsula. He did not know whither to direct his route, having probably little knowledge of geography, and, as a result, the unfortunate migrants wandered in a sort of aimless fashion all over the peninsula, journeying southward nearly to the southern tip, and, after circling Mount Sinai, pursuing a track which, as marked out by modern Bible students, resembled the meanderings of a fly crawling over a table. That they ever reached Palestine at all seems a marvel.

The miracle of the manna rain seems to have first occurred after the children of Israel had left Elim and had come into the Wilderness of Sin, which was in the western part of the Sinai Peninsula and more than one hundred miles south of the point where they had crossed the Red Sea. It happened on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departure from Egypt.

Thence they made their way northward to within less than one hundred miles of Jerusalem (then a town of the Jebusites), but turned back and all but reached the Red Sea at the place where they had crossed it. Again they turned and wandered in a southeasterly direction until they came to Eziongaber, on the other side of the peninsula, at the head of what is now called the Gulf of Akaba. Thence north through the Wilderness of Sin; back again toward the south and around the mountain chain lying to the east, and a final "trek" northward to the Promised Land. Infants newly born when the Israelites left Egypt were middle-aged men and women by the time they arrived in Palestine.

Just here it seems worth while to pause a moment and ask the question, What is a miracle?

The flying machine is not a miracle. Wireless telegraphy is not a miracle. The essence of a miracle lies in the supernatural.

When mysterious phenomena, which have been regarded as miracles, come to be understood, they cease to be supernatural, and are recognized as representing the working of natural laws. Lightning, for instance.

But in former times very little was known about the laws of nature, and hence everything that was not understood was attributed to the supernatural. An epidemic of disease was attributed to angry gods. Moses, when he failed in his efforts to persuade the Pharaoh to let the children of Israel go, may have pretended that it was through his own influence that certain plagues were brought upon the land.

That the Israelites in the wilderness should have looked upon a rain of food as a miracle is not in the least surprising. Scientific investigators have made it entirely clear what the manna was and how it came to appear like a rain from heaven.

During all the forty years of their wanderings they were sustained at least to some extent by manna. Doubtless on occasions it kept them from starving.

And well it might. Analyses have shown that the dried lichens contain 65 per cent of oxylate of lime and 25 per cent of a starchlike and highly nutritious substance which is also found in the moss on which reindeer feed in far northern latitudes, and which in the latter case is the chief food element. Mosses and lichens are nearly related botanically.

Since time immemorial manna has had important economic value as a famine food in desert regions all the way from Algeria to Tartary.

In 1829, during the war between Persia and Russia, there was acute famine in districts southwest of the Caspian Sea. One day, after a violent wind storm had been raging, the surface of the country was found covered with food which "fell down from heaven." Sheep devoured it greedily, thereby suggesting to the inhabitants that it might be good for them to eat. They ground it to flour and made bread, which proved palatable and nourishing.

The naturalist, Parrot, in 1828, had an opportunity to observe a shower of manna in Persia which covered the ground to a depth of six inches. It was undoubtedly carried by storm-winds from somewhere far distant.

In the Spring of 1841 there was an astonishing fall of manna near Lake Van, in the eastern part of Asia Minor, covering many square miles to a depth of four inches. It was gray in color and pleasant to the taste. White meal prepared from it was made into bread, which was declared to be little inferior to wheat bread.

A similar fall occurred in the western part of Asia Minor in 1846, lasting some days. It was most opportune, inasmuch as there was serious scarcity of food at the time.

In the following year General Jussuf, commanding a body of French troops engaged in military operations in Algeria, officially reported that during the campaign manna had been a most valuable help, furnishing food for his men and their horses.

Thus it would seem that manna is even now no great rarity, and that its production is not necessarily a miracle. As already suggested, we may have an opportunity to taste it ourselves and to decide whether it is a worth-while article of food in the form of candy-cakes or otherwise. The time may even arrive when we can buy it in paper boxes at the delicatessen shop around the corner.

And so once again science confirms the Scriptures and the further away we live from Bible times the more we know about them.

200 American Sailors Pay Visit To Soochow

Navy Men See Many Points Of Interest In Ancient City

Yesterday the Navy Y.M.C.A. conducted an excursion party of nearly two hundred American sailors to the ancient and interesting city of Soochow. The ships represented were the U.S.S. Huron, Alden, Broom, Greer Hart, Lea, Hovey, Upshur, Tarbell, Southard and Yarnell.

Special railway and tram cars were provided. At Soochow the party was met by Mr. W. W. Brockman and Mr. A. C. Wong of the Soochow Y.M.C.A., who had made all necessary arrangements, including donkeys, for the entire party and a fine "Chinese chow." Among the points visited were the Tiger Hill Pagoda, Temple of Five Hundred Gods, the Liu Yuen Gardens, the long street of Soochow and the big City Pagoda, the tallest in China.

On the return trip a special picnic supper was served aboard the train by the Navy "Y." From the enthusiastic comments of the boys it may be stated that the excursion was much enjoyed, especially in that it gave the Navy men an opportunity to see a typical and ancient Chinese walled City.

Special thanks are due to Mr. W. W. Brockman, general secretary of the Soochow Y.M.C.A., and Mr. A. C. Wong, of the same organisation, for their efficient leadership, and to the Shanghai-Nanking Railway Company for very special rates which were made for the occasion.

Judgment Reserved In Frisco Fraud Case

Fake Famine Plea Action Concluded At Mixed Court

The case of the two Chinese charged with defrauding the San Francisco public by inserting a false famine relief plea in Chinese newspapers there was concluded before Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Kwan in the Mixed Court yesterday, judgment being reserved.

In the concluding session the second accused, one Tseu Siaukoong, swung all the blame upon the other defendant, declaring that he had acted blindly as the tool of the latter. The address to which contributions were to be addressed, the second accused claimed, was that of rooms which were temporarily turned over to him by the first accused. He was instructed to receive all mail that came for the other. Notice of three registered letters arriving at the United States Post Office, all containing drafts on the International Banking Corporation, were received by him and turned over to the first accused, who secured the letters. The second accused protested that he knew nothing of the scheme and that he received none of the profits.

The sum of G.$252 is believed to have been secured through the advertisement inserted in the San Francisco papers. The fraud was exposed when a New York Chinese wrote to the local Famine Relief Committee asking that an investigation be made. The advertisement carried the names of former President Li Yuanhung and other prominent Chinese as patrons.

Office Boys Will Organise And Ask For Wage Increase

A union of the Chinese employes of foreign firms and families, including houseboys, office boys and others, is in process of formation, according to the Chinese press, which reports that there are over 40,000 such workers who will be affected, over 6,000 of whom have already indicated their desire to join the "union."

The object of the organisation is the obtaining of higher wages and it is reported that a meeting to discuss the proposed demand for increases will be called as soon as the body has been inaugurated.

DAMAGES ASKED FROM AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY

Suit For Alleged Breach Of Contract Is Begun In U. S. Court

Suit for damages in which the sum of $5,675 is claimed from the American Drug Company was started Monday in the United States Court for China by Mr. George Chishkin, a Russian.

In his petition Mr. Chishkin sets forth that he is a resident of the French concession and operates a concern known as Pro Bono Publico. He alleges that the American Drug Company on January 28 entered into a written agreement by the terms of which in consideration of an advertisement published by Pro Bono Publico in an "Economy & Discount Pocketbook" it would grant a discount of ten percent on purchases made at the American Drug Company's store to holders of the pocketbook.

The petition sets forth that the American Drug Company subsequently refused to grant ten percent discount to holders of the pocketbook and this caused those who had purchased it to demand return of their money.

The plaintiff claims $675, the sum he alleges was paid out for publication of the pocketbook and other damages in the sum of $5,000.

The Resolutions of Shanghai Laundry-Men's Guild for Increasing Laundry-Charges Towards Foreign Patrons

In order to protect our business from interference by S.M.C. Health Department, and maintain our living in this time of hard struggle, we, laundry-men at Shanghai, have formed the said guild for promoting our common interests, sanitary purposes, mutual helpfulness, and getting rid of those bad attempts between two sides; that is our men and servants of foreign houses. For such purposes, we carry out the following resolutions which we hope would meet foreign patrons' approval. They are as follows:—

1.—Every laundry-master should report to the guild with full address of his foreign patrons written on the special book; after receiving his report the guild should send man to investigate whether the fixed laundry-charges are contracted by monthly or each suit counting.

2.—It has been resolved that the fixed monthly charges are divided into: at dealing with blankets, trousers, increasing 2 times more than those former fixed charges (see prices fixed in the V Resolution) at if disapproval of the former apply, stop monthly laundry-service after the patrons' bills fully paid. At every laundry being prohibited to take the monthly laundry-service for such patrons until getting assurance. (The reason why is explained in the X Resolution); other laundry if willingly to take such services for such patrons, being wisely advised first to report to the guild with addresses of such patrons according to the I Resolution.

3.—It has been resolved that clothes of those Chinese servants in the foreign houses are rejected to take into any laundry. (They always force the laundry-men to do so); the laundry-masters always get heavy fine for this purpose. According to the XII Article of S.M.C Health Department for the purpose of preventing plague from being prevailed to iron the wet clothes is prohibited. If foreign patrons themselves are willingly to have their clothes to be ironed they are requested to sign their names and the amount of wet clothes that should be clearly put down in the 3 duplicate-books. (It should be fully explained in the XII Resolution) otherwise the laundry-master should be fined both by the guild and S.M.C.

Those washed clothes should be examined personally by foreign patrons respectively.

4.—In order to prevent those irregular patrons from violating what is said in the above mentioned (3) the laundry should prepare another 3 duplicate-books for serving the same. The charges should be fixed exclusively.

5.—It has been resolved that every laundry should resume their business as usual. For the sake of protecting our capitals from being loss and observing the regulations of S.M.C. Health Department for cleanliness, the guild has fixed the charges as following that are uniformly enforced by all laundries at Shanghai. They are as follows:—

1.—Big-sized suits of clothes at percent $18.00
2.—Small-sized suits of clothes at percent 4.00
3.—Summer overcoats of wood-fabric, pongee, other ripe or raw silk clothes to be washed by exceptional process each at ..... .20
4.—The above varities to be washed by ordinary process, each of its charge is not increasing; that is, it is charged according to the former rate.
5.—Clothes from foreign restaurants, bars, hotels, clubs, and companies, counting by whole amount, each at ..... .03
6.—All overcoats, no matter how the material is, each uniformally charged at.. .20

6.—Beginning from 1st July all old or new laundries should get certificates and 3 duplicate-books from the guild respectively. Both sides (Patrons and Laundries) should sign on the 3 duplicate-books. The process can save the trouble of mis-distribution in number of clothes from one to another, denying of tearing or broken spots by both sides, escaping with patrons' clothes by any dishonest laundry man.

7.—Every laundry-master should pay the fees of the certificate and 3 duplicate-books according to the net price paid by the guild to the printers.

8.—Bills should be printed by the printers specially hired by the guild only. When the laundry-master wants blank bills he should send his accounts to the guild that is authorised to examine these accounts, then blank bills are given and checked without any mistakes.

9.—If the laundry-master is to take charge of another's old business, he must see whether the certificate or duplicate-books have been withdrawn. If not, he could not get new ones from the guild.

10.—If the laundry-master will take the new patron's washing clothes, he is advised better to send this report first to the guild than before to have the new business. It is in defense of owing account to the former laundry.

11.—When any laundry-man goes to the patron's house for taking washing clothes, he should request the patron to count the number of clothes to be washed and sign the duplicate-books personally. If the patron is out or any one substitutes for him to do so, that one who signs should take the responsibility.

12.—If any laundry-master is violent the above-mentioned resolutions, he should be fined $30 for the fund of common object. If he rejects to be fined the guild has power to sue him in the Court for the fault of breaking the regulation of the guild.

13.—These regulations are submitted to corrections, provided the majority thinks to be so.

Spot bar silver was up ½d. and forward 3/8d. in London on Saturday.

The New York price advanced to 59⅞ cents and the London-New York cross rate declined to 377½. The official Sterling rate today was raised to 3/5½, the Gold Dollars rate to 6/5¼ the Rupee rate to 267¾ and the Yen rate dropped to 73. The market throughout the day was on the easy side and while in the morning business in Sterling was done at 3/6½ and in Gold Dollars at 66¾, in the afternoon business was done as low as 3/6 for Sterling, and 66¼ for Gold Dollars. The market, however, closed a shade above these rates with sellers of Sterling at 3/6¼ for near delivery and 3/6⅛ for forward and with sellers of Gold Dollars at 66½ for near and forward deliveries.

India bought silver again in London yesterday and with India as a fairly steady buyer and China also likely to come in at any time as a buyer the undertone of the silver market appears steady at the present level, as, no doubt, both India and China would be strong buyers at lower prices.

WEATHER

Overcast weather threatening some rain or thunder storms. Cyclonic circulating over Loochoos and Kin-Sing where a center of low pressures has appeared. South-easterly winds with some mist in the south. Variable breezes in the north.

Woodman, Don't Spare Those Trees!

CAREFUL examination of the Public Garden alterations has led THE CHINA PRESS to the conclusion that the scheme as proposed by the Municipal Council and the Commissioner of Public Works, is based on sound and irrefutable common sense and therefore ought to be carried out as planned. Feeling this way about it, we are glad to hear that a petition in support of the plan and bearing the signatures of a large number of the city's most important and influential business men is being forwarded to the Council.

THE CHINA PRESS already has reproduced the outline drawing of the plan as submitted to and approved by the ratepayers in the last budget so that our readers for the most part are familiar with what is proposed to be done. Briefly to recapitulate, for the purpose of this argument, it is proposed to enlarge the Gardens on the river and creek sides, the popular sides and to slice off an almost equal portion on the road side, which as observation shows, is not used at all.

The main object sought is the widening of the road leading south from the Garden Bridge and from Soochow Road and part of the plan as it has been explained to us contemplates the widening of the bridge itself. This is to be accomplished by a cantilever arrangement by means of which lanes for pedestrians will be swung on both sides of the present bridge. The roadways now reserved for pedestrians will be turned into runways for rickshas thus leaving the middle part for the trams and motor cars.

It is true that in carrying out this program eight or ten trees and some tropical undergrowth are to be sacrificed and whenever a tree is to be cut down, whether to make way for a new and necessary road, or because it is old and likely to become a menace to life the ears of the hard and cruel city managers are made to tingle by the outcries of those who love to think that they are more sentimental than others amongst us.

Here are eight or ten fine old trees which stand in the way of four or five thousand motor cars, twenty thousand rickshas and hundreds of thousands of people, and in the near future if this scheme is held up these trees will face even bigger odds. The traffic jam up and down the hill leading to the bridge becomes worse daily and with the huge new buildings going up in the neighborhood it is likely to grow into a hopeless tangle—this, unless some method of relief is devised.

With the sentiment which, mistakenly, wishes to preserve these trees for a year or two more we have no quarrel. This world in which we live is a poor and shabby one at the moment, but it would be poorer and shabbier if it lacked this sentiment. There are however, other considerations, other sentiments if you like. Children for instance, are not allowed to play under these trees because of the dank, humid, mosquito-breeding air the damp ground and undergrowth. The mothers insist that they play out in the open, on the river side and around the bandstand. The children themselves prefer the open parts and certainly all adults flock to the river side, which, under the plan now proposed is to be very greatly expanded.

The trees themselves are refreshing to the eye if you happen to notice them, which you don't because you are watching the traffic ahead and behind. In the early morning they afford a bit of shade to pedestrians who don't need it. So much for the trees and so much for the sentiment that would save them. The children don't need these trees any more than the grown-ups. But both the children and the grown-ups need more open space and they need it most importantly in this particular spot. That also is sentiment.

There is still another sentimental side to our argument. It requires no severe strain on the imagination to picture a tragic traffic smash-up on the racy, narrow incline running down from the bridge. Put eight old trees against as many young and useful human beings and which would you sacrifice? And where would the decision as to true sentiment lie?

And as to sacrificing trees, please bear in mind that George Washington chopped one down. And he didn't lie about it, either.

IMAGINATION

Some weeks ago I filled this column with the imaginary doings of one of those railless cars that we sometimes see crossing over the Nanking Road, and wending its way through the crowded thoroughfares of one of our side streets.

If you remember, I made this pathfinder imitate in its antics the achievements of a tank upon the war path. It had no respect for pavements or roads. It brought down all before it. Not satisfied with its meanderings, it reached a climax when it hurled its unoffending driver through a plate glass window and then stood back and admired the havoc.

This little story was a creature of the imagination. As far as I know there is not a plate glass window in the road which the railless cars patrol. I am perfectly certain that no driver was ever foolish enough to allow himself to be thrown from his pedestal, even to make an unorthodox entrance into his friend's shop.

In order to allay the fears of any of my readers who may feel nervous after reading these wild and imaginary doings of the cars, let me pass from the creature of imagination to the

REALITY

SAFETY FIRST!

That is one of the realities of our Tramway Company. I paid a visit to the Traction House a couple of evenings ago, and there had the pleasure of a chat with Mr. Muir, who has to do with most of our enquiries, and a host of other things. He was surrounded with models of trams, motors, rickshaws, wheelbarrows and every kind of conveyance that wanders about our busy streets. On the walls were all sorts of curious charts, pictures and mottos. Before I left mine host had explained most of the things mentioned, and what had been mysterious became as plain as the nose on the face of an ugly man. Charts, vehicles, pictures and mottos all had one end in view:

SAFETY FIRST!

I asked Mr. Muir what all the paraphanalia on the table was for. He brought forward a wonderful little model of a tram. He then pointed out how the whole structure of a railless car was built so that accidents became almost impossible. If a sleepy wanderer was caught bending, there was a pleasant seat provided in the front of the car which would invitingly take him, and, without mishap, carry him until the car was stopped, without calling upon him for a fare. If an unfortunate fell on the road, a car, unlike a motor car, would considerately shove out a front guard and lift him out of harm's way. In order to provide against accidents occurring from passengers jumping from the car when it was in motion, a special step had been made which would not allow the foot to become entangled with either of the rear wheels. If you take a look at one of the railless cars when next you see them passing over the Nanking Road, you will readily notice the clever contrivance that I have just mentioned. The speed of the cars is also regulated so that it is an easy matter to guide them out of the way of the most obdurate pedestrian.

EDUCATING THE PUBLIC

Thousands of leaflets are printed, distributed, placarded up in prominent places telling of the dangers that may arise if passengers attempt to alight from the car when it is in motion. Pictures show how to get on and off of the cars. Advertisements have been cut out, so as to make room for the reading matter which has as its object

SAFETY FIRST!

Those little models that I referred to above also had their uses pointed out to me by my courteous host. If an accident happens, despite all precautions, the drivers and others responsible for the car are brought to the office, and by the aid of these models not only can the company visualise the affair, but methods are pointed out to the drivers by which such accidents can be averted in the future.

It is interesting to note that these drivers have a protracted and intensive training to fit them to steer their trams through one of the most difficult thoroughfares, I suppose, in the world. Lectures are given regularly to all employees; every encouragement is given to the careful driver, and every censure to the reckless.

The results of these efforts on the part of the Tramway Company are already extraordinarily apparent. Charts hang upon the walls of the offices showing the tremendous increase in the number of passengers carried and accompanying them are other charts showing very plainly, that despite the increase there is a big drop in the number of accidents, so much so, that they bid fair to disappear altogether if only the public will do as much for its own safety as the Company is doing for it.

One could dwell upon numerous other efforts that are being taken to ensure both the comfort and convenience of the public but what evidently animates every member of the Tramways Company today is undoubtedly

SAFETY FIRST!

Elihu Root Optimistic On World Peace

Those who heard Elihu Root's Presidential address at the fifteenth annual meeting of the American Society of International Law, held in Washington on April 27, pronounced it an extraordinary analysis of world affairs. He eptomised the changes in European Governments resulting from the great war and then said:

"The parliament of man may come just as the parliaments of Britain and France and Italy have come, but it must be by growths and not by force nor by the false pretense of agreement where there is no real agreement, nor by international majorities overbearing minority nations through majority votes.

"The great force of Russia which aims to impose internationalism upon the world, therefore, halts the development of international law, the very foundations of which the existing government of Russia now repudiates. As the basis of international law is universal acceptance, either Russia must be excluded from the category of civilised nations or the law must wait upon the downfall of the present regime in Russia. In the meantime, every act which tends to support that regime, whether for sentiment or for trade, is a hindrance to the restoration of law and the rule of international justice. . . .

"The armistice of Nov. 11, 1918, left for the successful allied powers two quite distinct and in some respects incongruous tasks. The first task was to decide upon the terms of peace and to require compliance with those terms. That was a matter of power, of force.

"The second task in necessary sequence was to give effect to the universal desire of the civilised world by bringing all civilised nations into agreement for the future preservation of peace. That was a matter, not of force, but of reason, humanity, universal instinct of self-preservation. It must be voluntary, not compulsory. It was the concern of all neutral nations equally with all belligerent nations. It presupposed a world at peace in which peace, already attained, was to be preserved. It was to follow, not to be a part of the compulsions of conquest.

FRAMING OF THE LEAGUE.

"The Versailles Conference undertook to include both of these separate, distinct and incongruous processes in the same treaty. They framed a League of Nations for the future, they invited all neutrals to join and at the same time and in the same instrument they undertook to impose penalties to which they required the defeated belligerents to submit.

"The defeated belligerents were not admitted to the League and had nothing to say about it, while the neutral members of the League naturally had no right or authority respecting the terms of peace imposed by the treaty.

"The two processes were tied together, however, by provisions making the League of Nations the agent of the conquerors to see to the execution of the terms imposed upon the other defeated nations. Thus certain powers were vested in the League including neutrals, regarding the administration of occupied territory, plebiscites, scrutiny of government under mandates. These functions plainly were to be in exercise of derivative, not original, authority of the League, which became a mere agent of the belligerents for those purposes. Spain, Holland, Norway, for example, and any organisation which represents them can have no authority regarding a plebiscite in Silesia or the Government of Danzig, except within the limits of a specific agency created by the nations which had a right won by conquest or created by treaty between such nations and Germany.

"Another peculiarity of the treaty was that, although it contemplated the participation of all the belligerents, it was expressly made separable, by the provision that it should take effect when ratified by any three of the principal powers.

"Accordingly, when the other principal powers ratified the treaty and the United States refused to do so, the terms of peace became binding between Germany and the ratifying powers, although not between Germany and the United States. And the League of Nations, no longer a mere project, came into being and still exists, uniting for specified purposes substantially all the civilised countries, except the United States, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey.

LEAGUE'S CONFUSION

"The natural tendency of these arrangements and the discussion and controversy which they engendered was toward great delay and confusion.

"The imposition of terms of peace was a matter calling for prompt decision and compliance while the conquering armies were in being and able to compel compliance. Under the distractions and discussions incident to the formation of a League for future peace, this vital process of closing the war dragged along until the Western armies had mainly disappeared; and many of the issues of the war have passed into a new and prolonged stage of discussion.

"In the meantime, the Supreme Council of the belligerents, in which the United States continued entitled to a place which she ceased to fill, has held the center of the international stage trying to bring about the state of peace which the League of Nations was formed to preserve, and at the same time the League has been struggling with its special agency under the treaty without ever having been put by its principals in the position of recognised authority; and the organisation for future peace has remained incomplete in the face of continual actual war involving a majority of the people of Europe and the Near East.

"In considering our course as students, lawyers, American citizens, united by common interest in the Law of Nations, I think we must assume that the conditions which I have described are temporary; that before very long the immediate issue of the war will be settled for the time being and peace will be restored; that republican Germany and her associates will abandon the arrogant assertion of the kriegs raison; that the brutal and cruel despotism which now oppresses the people of Russia will meet the fate which awaits the violation of economic laws, and, failing to be rescued by those friends who are coming to its assistance in this and other countries, will fall, and the people of Russia will come to their own.

SMALL DIFFERENCES

"When these results have been reached, there will remain the hindrances of differing forms and methods favored by the nations within and the nations without the existing League. But the idea that by agreeing at this time to a formula the nations can forever after be united in preventing war by making war seems practically to have been abandoned; and the remaining differences are not of substance and ought not to prevent the general desire of the civilised world from giving permanent form to institutions to prevent further war. In the long run, from the standpoint of the international lawyer, it does not much matter whether the substance of such institutions is reached by amending an existing agreement or by making a new agreement. . . .

"The covenant of the League, under which so many nations are now included, commits its members fully to these fundamentals, and, while it undertakes to go further and do too much, the evident tendency of its members is to reduce this excess by interpretation and amendment and bring it down to the character of real representation of the common customs and common opinions of civilised peoples in favor of peace.

"On the other hand, the United States is certain to be ready to join in some form, in seeking the same result by these same essential methods.

"That will follow necessarily from the traditional policy of our country and the responsible declarations of our Government in both the legislative and the executive branches. . . .

"Most important for dealing with immediate danger to international peace is a system of international conferences upon questions of international policy. This a natural growth from experience. The Algeciras Conference is a type. The conference in London, which limited the effect of the Balkan wars, is another. It is a general belief that if Sir Edward Grey had secured the conference he sought in July, 1914, the war would have been averted. Whether it be by dispelling misunderstandings, allaying fears, soothing irritation, or by the repressive effect of general adverse opinion, a formal general conference of the principal nations ordinarily leads to a situation in which it is extremely difficult for any nation to begin war.

"The weakness of the practice hitherto has been in the fact that no one had a right to insist upon a conference; no one was under obligation to attend a conference. The step in advance, plainly indicated as the natural development of this most useful practice into a systematic institution, is to establish an administrative agency whose duty it shall be to call such a conference in time of threatened danger on suitable request, and to place all nations under obligation to attend the conference when called. Upon the substance of this there is no disagreement. The Council of the League does this and something more, and the difference is over the something more. The Council of the League is a perpetual, permanent conference, as distinguished from conferences ad hoc, to be called automatically whenever grave cause which disputed questions between nations shall be referred for adjudication and peaceful settlement.'

"The latest message of the President of the United States to Congress on the 12th of the present month, said: 'The American aspiration, indeed the world aspiration, was an association of nations based upon the application of justice and right, binding us in conference and co-operation for the prevention of war and pointing the way to a higher civilisation and international fraternity in which all the world might share. . . . In the national referendum to which I have adverted, we pledged our efforts toward such an association, and the pledge will be faithfully kept.'

"The pledge to which the President plainly referred in the paragraph just quoted, was contained in the Republican Platform.

DISAGREE ONLY ON MODES

"While this pledge was in the platform of one party, it was not, in fact, the subject of party controversy, and the enormous majority of over seven million votes given to the candidate standing by that platform justifies the assertion that these words state the true attitude of the American people, as that attitude is now certified in the passage which I have quoted from the President's message to Congress.

"It is apparent that the attitude of the League, and the attitude of America toward this subject do not differ in substance, however much they may differ as to the specific modes of effectuating the common purpose.

"The duty imposed upon the Council of the League, 'to formulate and submit plans for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice,' has been performed, and the convention establishing such a court has been adopted by the League and has already been ratified by many of its members. . . .

"There can be no real court without law to control its Judges, and there can be no effective law without institutions for its application to concrete cases. This is the traditional policy of the United States—to establish and extend the law declaring the rules of right conduct accepted by the common judgment of civilisation and to Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Concerning Jade

Jade is a name commonly applied to certain ornamental stones, mostly of a green colour, belonging to at least two distinct species, one termed nephrite and the other jadeite.

Jade, in its wide and popular sense, has always been highly prized by the Chinese, who not only believe in its medicinal value but regard it as a symbol of virtue.

Jade, according to Professor H. A. Giles, occupies in China the highest place as a jewel, and is revered as "the quintessence of heaven and earth."

"Green Jade" is the name by which we designate a High Grade brand of Cigarettes made of specially selected Virginia leaf.

Elihu Root Optimistic On World Peace

substitute in international controversies upon conflicting claims of right impartial judgment under the law in the place of war.

"The existing situation presents difficulties and embarrassments in arriving at a common understanding regarding the precise modes in which this general world policy shall receive effect; but I, for one, am not willing to assume that the patience and good sense of the diplomacy of the world, including our own country, will be unequal to the task of so disposing of the formal difficulties as to achieve the great object upon which all are agreed.

"It is further to be observed that conference upon matters of policy, either permanent or occasional, on the one hand, and the establishment of law and judicial disposal of questions of right, on the other hand, are not alternative and opposing methods. They are mutually supplemental parts of one and the same scheme to prevent war. Both are methods of bringing the public opinion of the world to bear upon the settlement of controversies. Neither covers the field without the other. Never before has there been such evidence of the power of public opinion as has been afforded by the vast propaganda through which the contending nations in the great war have tried their cases at the bar of public judgment of the world, and have sought to commend their conduct to the peoples of other nations.

"The idea that any formula can be devised under the working of which the world can be made peaceable by compulsion is manifestly in course of abandonment.

FORCE OF PUBLIC OPINION

"The public opinion of mankind is so mighty a force that it is competent to control the conduct of nations as the public opinion of the community controls the conduct of individuals.

"But it must be an intelligent, informed and disciplined opinion. The exit of autocracies leaves the direction of foreign relations under the ultimate control of multitudinous, ill-informed and untrained democracies. In place of dynastic ambitions, the danger of war is now to be found in popular misunderstandings and resentments.

"How are these vast democracies to be justly informed as to the rights and wrongs of controversies, and the fairness of policies? It seldom happens that the great multitude of citizens can argue out from first principles the complicated and difficult questions of right and wrong involved in international relations. It seldom happens that the subject is not obscured by misinformation and misleading suggestion, and by appeals to passion rather than to judgment. The only mode of meeting his great and vital need, dictated by reason and approved by experience, is the establishment of institutions, through which, when strife is not flagrant, the deliberate and unbiased opinion of mankind may declare and agree upon the rules of conduct which we call law, by which in times of excitement judgment may be guided, and by which the people may be informed of the limits of their rights and the demands of their duties; and by the establishment of institutions through which disputed facts may be determined and false appearance and misinformation may be stripped away and the truth be made known to the good and peaceful peoples of the world by the judgment of impartial and respected tribunals. In such institutions rests the possibility of growth of development for civilisation. Through them may be established by usage the habit of respecting law. They may create standards of conduct under which the thoughts of peoples in controversy will turn habitually to the demonstration of the justice of their position by proof and reason, rather than by threats of violence, so that the time will come when a nation will know that it is discredited by the refusal to maintain the justness of its cause by the procedure of justice.

"This is the work of international law, applied by an international court.

"The process will be slow, but all advance of civilisation is slow. Not what ultimate object we can attain in our short lives, but what tendencies towards higher standards of conduct in the world we can aid during our generation, is the test that determines our duty of service. The conditions which will hinder and delay effective action for the re-establishment of law are many and serious, but we must prepare. When the time for action comes, it must find the results of study, discussion and matured thought ready, as material for authoritative judgment by the nations, and, meantime, the voice of the least of us may be of some avail, urging that force be repressed and expediency be guided by the public opinion of the world made effective by declared and accepted rules of public right applied by competent and impartial international tribunals."

Household Hints

The fat of a neck or loin of mutton makes a far lighter and much richer steamed pudding than suet.

* * *

When boiling fish, remove all scum quickly as it rises to the top of the water, as it deadens the flavor of the fish if allowed to remain in the pan.

When jelly refuses to thicken put a grated carrot into a clean piece of cheesecloth and strain a few drops into the jelly pan. Then boil just a few seconds longer.

Powdered starch is a good silver polisher, and it is far superior to breadcrumbs, dough and such like for cleaning soiled wallpaper. Powdered finely and rubbed gently over the walls with a clean soft duster or an old muslin curtain, it will remove all stains.

Interviewing Shaw Is Bit Of An Ordeal

A London reporter has just had an unusual interview with "G. B. S." and writes his experience as follows:

BY C. GRAVES

After fully expecting to be confronted with a sardonic grotesque clad cap-a-pie in a Jaeger suiting, it was an agreeable surprise when I discovered Mr. Bernard Shaw to be a benevolent-looking patriarch in trench boots studded with bronze nails.

Hoping to secure a full-length interview on modern dancing or some other piquant subject, I found him, after a long search, seated on top of a lofty sand dune gazing out pensively to sea, bearded chin on hand, what time had ruminated the subject matter of his forthcoming lecture tour in the north of England.

Plucking up courage I asked for an interview.

DIFFERENCE IN VALUES

"Young man," he said promptly, 'there is one person in the world you cannot interview. That is a journalist. Supposing I gave you one, what would you get for it? Five shillings and sixpence. Supposing I had written it? Several hundreds of pounds. You had better ask me a few isolated questions if you are clever enough and I'll do my best."

Who said Shaw was a bit brusque? One thing led to another. He refused a cigarette.

The sound of the sea started it. "What d'you think of the new music? Merely a tour de force?"

"All new music is a tour de force," was the curt reply. "Why do you say merely a tour de force? You might as well say that Shakespeare was merely the greatest of dramatic poets."

"Oh!" (Silence) "Is modern dancing more sensuous than the oldtime waltz?"

"Why do you ask me? Ask the dancers."

"Oh! Could folk dancing be successfully introduced on the stage?"

"It often has been." (Silence.)

"Oh! Is there any one in England to correspond with Sarah Bernhardt in France as head of the theatrical profession?"

"The theatrical profession has no heads. It has only idols, and all the idols have their turn." (Silence.)

"Oh! Would Mrs. Patrick Campbell fill the role?"

"Ask her. How do I know?"

"Oh." (Silence.) "To what an extent should swearing by low-life characters and others be permitted on the stage?"

"The stage does not live by permissions. An oath can be made offensive on the stage—so can a prayer. It all depends on how it is done." (Silence.)

ASTOR HAS OWN INSANITY

"Does it affect an actor's sanity to play an hysterical part for long?" (I knew that an actor had done that in one of his plays, so it seemed a good "draw.")

"No more than it affects his figure to play Richard III. or Caliban. The particular form of insanity which makes a man an actor makes him proof against all other forms of it." (Silence.)

"Oh, er—are the Government people merely playing at tin soldiers in Ireland?"

"They are not playing at soldiers at all." ("Oh!") "They have simply let loose a body of rioters on the people of Ireland instead of conducting serious military operations. An Irish Parliament, with such resources at its command as the British Government possesses, would within three days convince any insurgent force that an attack on an Irish police barracks would be an infallable method of suicide." (Silence.)

BIT BRUSQUE AFTER ALL

"Oh! How far are masters unnecessary at public schools?"

"Just as far as warders are unnecessary at Wormwood Scrubbs, and no farther." (Silence.)

"Oh! Do you like being interviewed?"

A grunt. I turned and fled. Perhaps, after all, he is a bit brusque.
